WILL TELL DETAILS OF TAMMANY GRAFT

Sulzer, and Not John Hennessy, to Inform Public of Stillwell's Confession.

NO STATEMENT FROM MURPHY

Charges Regarding Payment for Judgeship to Be Laid Before Grand Jury.

New York, October 26.—Charles F. Murphy, at midnight, gave out the following affidavit:
Charles F. Murphy, being duly sworn, says:
"I live at No. 205 East Seventeenth Street, Borough of Manhattan, city of New York.
"I have been informed that one Hennessy has stated that Hon. Edward E. McCall paid money to me in consideration of his nomination to the Supreme Court.
"Such statement is unqualifiedly false, as I never asked for nor did I ever receive from Judge McCall himself, or from any person on his behalf, directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value at any time.
(Signed) CHARLES F. MURPHY.
George W. Plunkitt made a similar affidavit.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
New York, October 26.—Despite the fact that there was no active campaign work to-day, there were several interesting developments in connection with the race for the mayoralty.
Edward E. McCall, the Tammany majority candidate, in a lengthy statement issued to-night, denies absolutely John A. Hennessy's charge that he (McCall) paid $5,000 to Charles F. Murphy and former District Leader George W. Plunkitt, for his nomination as Supreme Court judge. McCall declares he did not pay any money to anybody for the nomination. He denies having discussed his nomination with the late Anthony Brady, and denies having borrowed money from former Police Inspector McLaughlin. In conclusion, he calls upon Hennessy to make his charges in writing. If Hennessy does that, McCall says he will bring action against him.
William Sulzer announced that he, and not John Hennessy, will make the details of Tammany graft revealed by the alleged confession of former Senator McLaughlin, in an interview with Hennessy in the former Senator's cell in Sing Sing. The sudden change of program was announced after a conference between Sulzer and his chief lieutenant, Hennessy.
Asked by reporters if he had any witnesses to corroborate his statement that Allan Ryan, campaign contributor of $10,000, had been turned over to Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy, the deposed Governor said:
"I have satisfactory proof to substantiate all that I have said about Ryan, but I cannot go into that phase of the controversy just now."
"Have you asked for a grand jury investigation of the charges you make against Murphy and other Tammany men of collecting large sums for campaign expenses and failing to account for them?"

"We will come to that later. Just watch what I say from the stump, and you will get all the facts you want."

Confident of Election.
The Sulzer supporters in the Sixth Assembly District are absolutely confident of his election. A constant stream of visitors pouring into his headquarters during the day.

District Attorney Whitman announced to-day that he proposed to lay before the grand jury the charges made by Sulzer and Hennessy regarding the payment of large sums of money to certain politicians by candidates for judicial nominations. Subpoenas are to be issued for both Sulzer and Hennessy. The matter is to be taken up immediately after the election next week.

The district attorney said, however, that no legal evidence had been laid before him so far.
"The incident of the $35,000 note transaction, which Mr. Hennessy couples with the purchase of a judgeship, cannot be taken up because of the statute of limitations," said Mr. Whitman. "As I understand it, this matter is ten years old, but reference has been made of similar transactions about these years."

Mr. Whitman also announced that the charge of a $25,000 contribution from the late Anthony Brady had been turned over to Tammany Leader Murphy, and not accounted for, would be investigated. Judge Samuel A. Beardsley, who is alleged to have offered this contribution to Sulzer, who declares he refused it, is to be subpoenaed to tell of the transaction. A subpoena is also to be issued for W. Bourke Cochran, who is alleged to have knowledge of certain political jockeying.

Formal Reply Expected.
The expected reply from Charles F. Murphy to the Sulzer charges, which the Tammany Leader was said to be preparing, is expected to-day. It is not forthcoming to-night and the impression was general among Tammany men that no formal reply would be issued beyond calling attention to the fact that the impeachment court had disposed of Sulzer's case and that the Governor had failed to take advantage of the opportunity given him to appear upon the stand and defend himself.

It was learned to-night that Hennessy in one of his speeches in the coming week intends to make public the name of a Pennsylvania contractor who was told he would have to pay $150,000 to Tammany if he wanted to secure a certain big State contract. This man, it is said, has since then obtained contracts aggregating many millions of dollars.
George Foster Peabody to-day confirmed the statement made by Hennessy in a speech on Saturday night that a certain judge had advised Peabody, who was representing the State in litigation before the court, to "see Mr. Murphy and state your case to him."

Battle of Bitterness.
New York, October 26.—With election day only a little more than a week off, the campaign for municipal offices in Greater New York, which had been marked with animosity outwardly expressed between the various factions, has suddenly developed into a scorching battle of witnesses, of bitterness, of charges of graft in public office, and of political trickery.

This order was largely brought about by an entrance into the campaign of John A. Hennessy, executive auditor of the State, political appointee of William Sulzer, the deposed Governor. It is on Hennessy rather than on his late chief—Sulzer, who is endeavoring to return to Albany as a member of the State Assembly—that all eyes are turned. Hennessy's charges and challenges have caused an awakening of interest among voters, and led Tammany leaders to plan countercharges. State department executives, variously named, have uncovered, and challenging the occupants of State and city offices and the political associates to reply.

Hennessy served a term in the State Assembly several years ago, during which he gained the lifelong friendship of William Sulzer, then Democratic floor leader. When Sulzer became Governor, one of his early appointments was Hennessy as "executive auditor," a place that gave him the opportunity to investigate State departments. Always opposing what he termed "boss rule," Hennessy entered the local campaign with alleged disclosures of irregularity that have come near overshadowing all else. Meanwhile, Sulzer is conducting his campaign to the Sixth Assembly District, where he holds the Progressive nomination and is making several speeches each day, telling his side of the impeachment charges. Tammany leaders have expressed their belief that a scandal will be resented outside the Sixth District and that their candidate for Mayor, Edward J. Kelly, and other Tammany nominees will benefit in other parts of the city.

Hennessy, John Purroy Mitchell, Fusion nominee for mayor, is making a fight on Tammany Hall and McCall, candidate as the alleged collector of Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, is making a fight on Mitchell and McCall as "boss controlled."

SOUND ADVICE TO YOUNG DOCTORS

Dr. Moore, in Sermon, Wants One to Use His Talents Like Luke.

Speaking to the student body and the faculty of the Medical College of Virginia at the Second Presbyterian Church yesterday morning on "Luke, the Beloved Physician," Rev. W. W. Moore, D. D., president of Union Theological Seminary, said that the medical profession was enormously overstocked, and asked if there were not before him some who would not, like Luke, devote their talents to the direct work of the gospel. He stated that the ratio of physicians to population is one to less than 600, though he would not advance that as a reason why men who thought they ought to practice medicine should turn aside from their purpose. He said, however, that the great opportunity for the young man of the present time, who is thoroughly convinced that his true calling is that of a doctor, is to be found in the work of a medical missionary. Christ, he said, was a medical missionary, and was profoundly touched with feeling for men's physical infirmities.

Dr. Moore showed the opportunities that are everywhere present in the country for the doctor to carry the gospel with him. He said that none finds such opportunities of preaching and teaching the gospel as the faithful doctor. He said that the training of the physician was the finest in the world, and showed how it added to Luke, the apostle, to preach the gospel and to write two great books.

Temperatures Below Normal Are Promised

Washington, October 26.—Temperatures below normal are promised throughout the country, featured the Weather Bureau's forecast for the week, made public to-day.

A disturbance over the Mississippi Valley to-day will advance eastward, with rains in the Eastern and Southern States Monday night or Tuesday, and followed by decidedly colder weather. Spreading the Great Central Valley of the Great States Monday and Tuesday, says the bulletin.

"This change to colder weather will be attended by general frosts in the Southern States, except the Florida peninsula."

DEPARTS FOR COLUMBUS

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Cleveland, October 26.—Silently and with the secrecy that has marked her movements since her arrival in Cleveland on Friday, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst departed for Columbus to-night.

Virtually the only time she was seen during her visit here was when she delivered her public lecture Saturday night. To-day she continued her policy of seclusion, and the only persons who knew the hour of her departure were Miss Joan Wickham and Mrs. Eunice Brannon of New York, who accompanied her.

Miss Brenda Franklin, who looked after Mrs. Pankhurst's affairs in Cleveland, declared the suffrage leader was delighted with her reception here. She declared the people had responded heartily to her lecture, but refused to say exactly how much was cleared, giving her reason that it might cause jealousy in other cities.

WILSON'S SPEECH CAUSES GOSSIP

First Utterance Giving Any Information as to Thoughts About Second Term.

Washington, October 26.—Political Washington to-day gossiped about President Wilson's speech at Congress Hall, Philadelphia, when he declared, "If you think too much about being re-elected, it is very different to be worth re-electing."

It was the first utterance that has given any intimation of what the President's thoughts were about a second term. Prominent Democrats, however, said that the President's point of view, declared that he was not giving the slightest concern to anything but the few years ahead; that he was intent on doing what he thought best, and leaving the judgment of his administration to the country when it was ended.

"I don't care a continental about a second term," the President is quoted by some of his friends as having said not long ago. "I have been elected to one job and I must first do that well before I can think of doing another."

In many quarters was interpreted as meaning that many people who had come to President Wilson's aid for "things" as he phrased it, sought to give the impression that on the granting of their requests depended the political future of the administration.

"It is constantly necessary," said the President at Philadelphia, "to come away from Washington and renew one's contact with the people who do not swarm there, who do not ask for anything and who trust you to do your duty without their personal counsel."

AUTHOR OF "FI FI SIGHTS" IS SOME SONG WRITER NOW

Cinderella Dope Turns From Literature to Sentimental Lyrics, but Fails to Convince Song Editor That Moonlight Filters in Poetry.

Cinderella Dope, author of Henrico County's only six-best-seller—"Fi Fi Sights"—breezed into an office last night, if it is possible for tight-skirted 19 to breeze, and produced a cylinder ruled writing paper, rolled to the thickness of a lead pencil. She untied the pink ribbon that bound it in the middle and spread the manuscript solicitously on the desk.
"I want you to criticize my song poem," said Miss Dope with a directness inherited from her father. "I answered an advertisement of a music publishing house in New York and got a special letter from them to-day, by mail saying that good rags and sentimental songs will pay anywhere up to $10,000. All you have to do is write the words—they write the music themselves. I made mine sentimental."

The optimistic manuscript made—essays on the moonlight and the moonlight, she said, was impossible. There were only two stanzas, so it might have been worse. The song poem:

(By Cinderella Dope, Henrico County.)
"In the evening, O, my sweetheart,
In the old sweet days gone by,
We watched the phantom moonlight
Filter through the sky."

"In the present, O, my sweetheart,
I sit longing by the fence;
My heart is like a vacant lot for Happiness is hence."

When the critic came to Miss Dope was beaming on him with the light of genius in full clutch of the gleam. Her eyes shone with the concealed air of triumph of a man sitting behind a desk.

"I knew it would affect you," said Miss Dope.
"I don't like to say it myself, but I know that nobody who has ever loved will fail to respond to its pathos. Don't you see? I made it that way on purpose. It's sure to be a hit, isn't it? because everybody has loved—at least everybody who is over sixteen."

"But 'filter through the sky'—you know that sounds, too, too, reservoir," objected the song critic.
"Oh, that's just a figure of speech, like 'phantom moonlight,'" said Miss Dope, undismayed. "There really isn't such a thing as phantom moonlight, and it doesn't filter, it just shines; but shines is so common. I wanted to say it differently."

"But my heart is like a vacant lot—honestly that's too real-estate to be sentimental, isn't it?" complained the song critic, conscious of something amiss.

"Not at all," answered Miss Dope. "On the contrary, that's just where the pathos comes in. Don't you see? Vacant lot—empty, vast, forlorn—just like one's heart feels when the memory of past happiness makes it sad. Don't you see? She—or he—is longing by the fence out in the moonlight and his—or her—heart feels desolate like a vacant lot. Why, I can just feel it."

"But there isn't any chorus," she was told.
"That's why my song is original," countered Miss Dope. "All sentimental songs have choruses. It's so trite, I made mine different on purpose. Just two stanzas palming two emotions—longing, despair—like Heine's 'Sich sucht.' Don't you see how strong the effect will be?"

It was too much. The song critic leaned back in his chair and pressed his hand to his mouth. Miss Dope looked at him for a moment with a bewildered air and rolled the manuscript back to the thickness of a pencil. She breezed out with her nose in the air.

CONFESSES MANY THEFTS

Work So Easy It Is Laughable, Bastain Tells Detectives.

San Francisco, October 26.—William Bastain, who, for five years, has been known as a responsible citizen with a profitable wholesale jewelry business, today confessed himself a robber with a record covering many years. He was captured Friday night, when a pet bull pup pinned him in a corner as he was attempting to steal into the residence of Ulrich Dobrunner.
"My work has been so easy it has been laughable," Bastain told detectives when he finally broke down. "I have never been disturbed when at work. Jewelers bought the diamonds I stole, and the mint took my melted gold without question.
"I have always been a natural thief, and I have found it easy to steal. I have never been in a position where I had to shoot until Friday night. My reluctance to use my revolver caused my capture."
Bastain's property investments have been large. Thousands of dollars have been sent by him to support his mother in Germany. He has had the best educational and social advantages. With a sister he has occupied a handsome furnished apartment, where police to-day said they had found evidence to substantiate his confession.

How Much Can You Lay Aside?

One depositor tells us that the best thing he ever did was to "have a session with himself"—he figured up his earnings, his expenses, and decided how much he could lay aside. The size of his savings account gives weight to his testimony.

Don't be ashamed to bring in small sums. True, this is a big bank, and we handle many of the largest accounts, but that's no reason why we should smile at an opening deposit of $1, which is the minimum. We allow 3% interest on savings, compounded semi-annually.
